Something new is bubbling up and out, and this will call for courageous people led by the Spirit to bring about new forms of community. We are forming a dynamic and committed cohort of ministry leaders ready to meet together bi-monthly for a six month process to discern and imagine the future of spiritual communities. Bec Cranford, Gateway Center, Director Of Community Engagement & Volunteer Services

Meet Bec!

Bec started her career in service, education, and humanitarian work. Bec's commitment to be a life-long learner and servant leader started early in her career with Americorps, where she led a family literacy project and helped coordinate a rural transportation program for the poor in Eastern Texas. Bec's history of justice and advocacy work includes homeless service agencies, para church ministries, and global justice projects. Her insight on leadership development, practical theology, homelessness, advocacy and the nonprofit world comes from years of unique experiences throughout America and the world.

Bec has taught, guest lectured, and tutored over the years in various academic settings including colleges and universities, as well as church, parachurch organizations, and community outreaches. Her commitment to the marginalized intensified after Bec began to study Biblical theology in 2005.

Bec received her B.A. in Biblical Theology and Practical Theology in Missions at Southeastern University in Lakeland, Florida. She received her MDiv from the Assemblies of God Theological Seminary in May of 2013.

Bec cares deeply about those that society has rejected, and those religiosity and systems of power continue to alienate. Bec focuses on ecumenical unity, interfaith justice work, and humanitarian endeavors in her spare time, speaking at many events and conferences and writing for various publications.

Bec currently serves as the Director of Community Engagement at Gateway Center and as a contextual education supervisor for Candler School of Theology.

Bec is a loyal partner, one tough mother, and a folk artist in her spare time.
