CHRISTIANS OFTEN TALK ABOUT RACISM IN TERMS OF PERSONAL ATTITUDES. THIS IS IMPORTANT, BUT INSUFFICIENT.

Christians must also consider how racism functions to obscure economic exploitation. This group will engage an in-depth conversation about race and economics through readings of Scripture, book excerpts, and articles. The goal is to move beyond the idea of racism as a personal attitude to more challenging questions about how racial prejudice often hides economic injustice. A closer look at these issues can help us more faithfully answer God's call for justice, from the prophets to Jesus to James.
